ARTICLE 6: DEFINITIONS

SECTION 6.1: PROBATIONARY EMPLOYEE

An employee who has been hired on a full-time or part-time basis and who has been continuously employed by the Employer for ninety (90) or less calendar days is a probationary employee. After ninety (90) days of continuous employment, the employee shall become a regular employee unless the probationary period is extended by mutual agreement. The Employer may extend the probationary period for up to an additional ~~ninety sixty~~ (6099) days. Such an extension must be presented to the employee in writing along with a written explanation of the reason(s) for the extension. The Employer shall not unreasonably or arbitrarily extend a probationary period beyond the initial ninety (90) days. During the probationary period, an employee may be discharged without recourse to the grievance procedure. If deemed necessary during the probationary period, the employee's supervisor will provide feedback on their performance with the intention to clearly identify job performance issues and will be available to answer any questions the employee may have. Employees completing the probationary period shall be credited with seniority retroactive to date of hire. Employees who are terminated solely due to failure to meet a training deadline or compliance requirement but are otherwise rehired within 6 months will not be required to serve a new probationary period if they had completed the probationary period prior to being terminated. If an employee is terminated prior to completing the probationary period and is rehired within 6 months, the time previously served during the probationary period shall be credited towards the completion of the probationary period, unless the termination was for cause unrelated to training or compliance.
